Sharon, Aged 22

The most important thing to keep in mind when going into high school is to be yourself. Besides, I don't know what your middle school was like, but high school teachers will not care about things such as how much homework you already have in one night. It's best to just learn to deal with things and manage your time wisely so you can achieve everything you need to.

Frank, Aged 21

I think almost every kid feels both nervous and excited before their first day. You will probably love it. I know I did. You should join in some sports or activities that will make your high school experience more enjoyable. Good luck!

David, Aged 19

I'm not going to lie. The first day is kind of frightening. But you'll get used to it. Don't be afraid of anyone; upperclassmen will pick on you more if you let them know you're afraid. Just take it easy. Making some friends and staying with them will greatly help you get used to high school quickly. After the first week it's really not bad at all. Don't worry.

Eddie, Aged 20

When I started high school I was really nervous too, especially since I had been homeschooled all through middle school and didn't really know anyone. I suppose the best advice would be to just relax. The first couple of days can be a little bit hard, but things will become easier before you know it.

1. What can we infer from Sharon's words about high school? _____

- A. Teachers are quite strict.
- B. Students often stay up at night
- C. Teachers provide little care for students.

D. Students should make good use of their time.

2. Who mentions the importance of friends? _____

A. David B. Frank C. Sharon D. Eddie

3. How did Eddie feel on his first day of high school? _____

A. Excited B. Worried C. Bored D. Relaxed

B

What's your feeling when you step into senior high school? It is a completely new experience, but you shouldn't worry. We've got some tips to help you.

●You're not alone

Remember that everybody else in your grade is in the same boat. You may not notice it, but they're just as nervous as you are.

Moving up to senior high school is a chance, not a problem. Things are different, and all you need to do is to be polite and learn the new rules.

●The teachers will help you

If you don't know what to do or are worried about something, then ask for help. Teachers are probably the best people to turn to because they have experience in helping new students. Pay attention to what your teachers say.

●Everything changes

There are lots of differences between junior high school and senior high school. You will have your lessons with different teachers in different schools. You will have homework for different subjects on different days, so make sure you get organized.

●Other points

If you've got an elder brother or sister at senior high school, then ask them for advice. Be yourself! It sounds simple, but things will become much better if you just act naturally.

Going to bed early makes a difference. You'll also find it easier to get up in the morning!

4. The author says that you're not alone because other students _____.
A. are polite and friendly B. will help you if possible
C. will learn the new rules with you D. feel the same as you do
5. What does the author think of moving up to senior high school?
A. It is a difficult problem. B. It sounds simple.
C. It's a good chance. D. It's worrying.
6. Which of the following does the author advise you to do?
A. Don't be shy. B. Just act naturally.
C. Change yourself. D. Pay attention to what your classmates say.
7. The main purpose of the passage is to _____.
A. tell students about a new experience
B. tell students how to make full use of time
C. help students that are going to senior high school
D. tell students that teachers are the best helpers

Have you ever thought that music can have an effect on animals? Dr. Fisher has put music in over 1, 100 animal shelters, saying that it makes dogs and cats quiet and even cuts down on barking. Fisher asked artists around the world to share dog-and-cat friendly music. She gives it free to animal shelters.

One fan was Tina. Winter temperatures at the rural shelter for six dogs and six cats usually ran below zero and the wind blew nearly every day. To calm the animals, Tina tried the radio. Besides poor reception, the news and sports had people shouting and crying loudly. "The difference is great." she said. So she and her husband had to buy a second player for the cats. "When we play songs they like, they go and sit by the speakers." Tina said.

No one has studied the impact of Fisher's music idea. But others have looked at how music and noise in general affected animals. A study found that animals were more likely to sleep and less likely to bark when Mozart, Beethoven and other similar music were playing, but not when heavy metal and other sounds were.

A survey of more than 500 shelters guided by Fisher validated her idea, finding barking reduced by half and animals more relaxed. It just destresses them.

Beyond the music, the shelter staff do what they can to reduce stress for the dogs, including toys, food and spending time with them. "Reducing their stress helps them show off their personalities and they can get adapted more quickly," said Fisher. "The music also helps relax staff members and that benefits the animals too."

8. When dogs listen to dog friendly music. They will _____.

- A. calm down B. get excited C. become clever D. never bark

9. The underlined word "validated" in Paragraph 4 can be replaced by "_____."

- A. doubted B. refused. C. proved D. changed

10. What can we learn from the last paragraph?

- A. Reducing stress is of great benefit to the dog.
B. The dogs in the shelter are fond of toys.
C. It is hard for the dogs to be adapted.
D. The staff members also like classical music.

第三部分七选五（共 5 小题；每小题 3 分，满分 15 分）

Want to know how to be a confident friend-finder? We can help, with four easy steps.

Step 1 Change your mental state.

It's easy to get so freaked out (不安的) about being in a new situation that you start throwing off don't-come-near-me signals. And guess what? It worked. (1) Instead, change your attitude with some positive thinking. Tell yourself: It'll be great to get to know someone new" or "I can't wait to hear what these girls have to say. "

Step 2 Remember, the eyes have it.

The first place we look at when we're uncomfortable is the floor. No one can tell if we're embarrassed. We can't tell if anyone is looking at us. Whoa! (2) Holding your head up and making eye contact is a bold (大胆的) move. It's confident and friendly.

Step 3 (3)

Does starting a communication bring on an attack of shyness? Try adding a good question to your friend-finding tools. Strong opening questions usually begin with "what" or "how" words that get people talking. Typically, our first instinct (本能) is to ask a "can" or a "do" question, like "Can I borrow a pencil? " or " Do you know where the bathroom is? (4) Asking "what" or "how" questions gets you more information to respond to. Try something like "Hi. I really like that flower. How did you draw it? " or "Hi. I'm new. What's the least scary lunch option in the cafeteria? "

Step 4 Practice, practice, practice.

Making new friends is a skill. (5) But the more you practice, the more relaxed and natural. You'll feel, and the easier it will get. So flash that smile, offer some welcoming words, and soon you'll be hanging out with your newest friends!

- A. People don't come near you.
- B. All you need is one question.
- C. Listen closely to their answers.
- D. Not a good way to meet people.
- E. The thought of meeting people makes you excited.
- F. But that only gets you short answers. Like "Yeah" or "Down the hall".
- G. Like art, music, or sports, it takes practice to feel truly confident of it.
